Part III: Overview of the Status of Adoption of Access to Information Legislation in Africa

60. Pursuant to the Resolution on the Expansion of the Mandate and Re-appointment of the Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Expression and Access to Information in Africa, the Special Rapporteur is mandated to “submit reports at each Ordinary Session of the African Commission on the status of the enjoyment of the right to freedom of expression and access to information in Africa.”4 With regards to access to information, which is enshrined in Article 9(1) of the African Charter, the Special Rapporteur highlights the progress made in the adoption of access to information legislation on the continent since the last reporting period.

61. In 2010, when the process of the development of the Model Law on Access to Information in Africa began, only five (5) AU Member States had adopted access to information laws. As at September 2016, nineteen (19) had adopted such laws, including: Angola; Burkina Faso; Cote d’Ivoire; Ethiopia; Guinea; Kenya; Mozambique; Nigeria; Niger; Rwanda; South Africa; South Sudan; Sierra Leone; Sudan; Tanzania; Togo; Tunisia; Uganda; and Zimbabwe.5

62. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur wishes to commend Kenya for enacting the Access to Information Act on 31st August 2016.

63. In her Activity Report submitted during the 58th Ordinary Session, in May 2016, the Special Rapporteur noted that Ghana’s Parliament began consideration of the long awaited Right to Information Bill on 08 March 2016, and urged the Republic of Ghana to ensure its speedy adoption. However, the Special Rapporteur notes that this Bill has still not been adopted by Parliament.

4 See ACHPR/Res.122 (XXXII) 07: Resolution on the Expansion of the Mandate and Re-appointment of the Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Expression and Access to Information in Africa, adopted during the 42nd Ordinary Session of the African Commission that took place in Brazzaville, Congo from 15 to 28 November 2007
64. The Special Rapporteur would also like to note that 2016 marks the first celebration of 28 September as the International Day for Universal Access to Information, following adoption of UNESCO Resolution (38 C/70) on 17 November 2015. In commemoration of this important day, the Special Rapporteur held a seminar in Luanda, Angola, in recognition of the role played by Angola as a co-sponsor of the Resolution.
Part V: Conclusion and Recommendations

65. The Special Rapporteur notes that, during this inter-session period she received several reports alleging violations of freedom of expression in various State Parties including: Burundi; Lesotho; South Sudan; Zambia; and Zimbabwe. A number of these reports alleged harassment of journalists and other media practitioners, in violation of the African Charter and the Declaration.

66. Whereas clarification on the details contained in the allegations was sought from the State Parties concerned, the Special Rapporteur notes that no formal response has been received at the Commission concerning the allegations.

67. The Special Rapporteur reiterates her call to State Parties to repeal all criminal defamation laws, and to further investigate and punish perpetrators of murder, kidnapping, torture, harassment and intimidation of journalists, in accordance with the Declaration and Article 9 of the African Charter.

68. The Special Rapporteur also notes with concern, the emerging practice of States Parties, increasingly during the electoral period, of interrupting or limiting access to telecommunication services such as the Internet, social media and messaging services.

69. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur wishes to highlight the Declaration of Principles of Freedom of Expression in Africa, which underscores the vital nature of freedom of expression and reaffirms the fundamental importance of freedom of expression as an individual human right, as a cornerstone of democracy and as a means of ensuring respect for all human rights and freedoms, and lastly indicates that laws and customs that repress freedom of expression are a disservice to society. Furthermore, Principle II (1) and (2), on interference with freedom of expression, provide that, “No one shall be subject to arbitrary interference with his or her freedom of expression,” and further, “Any restrictions on freedom of expression shall be provided by law, serve a legitimate interest and be necessary and in a democratic society.”

70. Accordingly, the Special Rapporteur calls on State Parties to cease the practice of interrupting or limiting access to telecommunication services in general, and specifically during the electoral period.

71. The Special Rapporteur also calls on State Parties holding elections in the coming months to ensure the protection of journalists and media practitioners, in accordance with the African Charter and the Declaration.

72. Lastly, the Special Rapporteur calls on State Parties with pending ATI bills to ensure adoption and implementation of these important laws, and reiterates her call to the Republic of Ghana to adopt the Right to Information Bill, which has been pending for several years.
