6. The purpose of these activities and meetings was to enhance the visibility of the African Commission.

7. The 44th Ordinary Session was preceded by the NGO Forum, organised by the African Centre for Democracy and Human Rights Studies, which was held from 7 to 9 November 2008. The over 200 interest groups and participants, examined the human rights situation in Africa, and expressed concerns over specific issues such as the situation of the rights of women and conflicts in the Great Lakes Region.

9. He said that the Nigerian Government is committed to the promotion of human rights, peace and stability across the region, and that President Alhaji Umaru Musa Yar’Adua, GCFR, has pledged the commitment of his administration to democratic and open society based on the rule of law, and a country that is fair to all persons living in it. He added that the Government has recently developed a Federal Action Plan for the protection and promotion of human rights in Nigeria, and is also taking steps to ensure the entrenchment of the culture of human rights.

10. The Executive Director of the Centre for Democracy and Human Rights Studies, Mrs Hannah Forster, the representative of Non-governmental Organisations, expressed concern at the continuous human rights violations in some African countries, caused or aggravated by poverty, conflicts, and bad governance. She expressed the concern of the NGO Forum regarding the persistence of conflicts in the Great Lakes Region of Africa and flow of refugees. Mrs. Hannah Forster called on African Governments affected by armed conflicts to ensure that all parties involved in the conflicts respect international humanitarian law, and that those who commit war crimes be brought before competent courts for trial. She requested the African Commission to adopt a resolution on the violation of human rights and international humanitarian law committed by all persons in conflicts in Africa. Mrs. Hannah Forster also expressed concern about human rights violations against women and children, in particular the practice of harmful traditional practices and trafficking in women.

11. The Executive Director Mr. Gilbert Sebihogo, on behalf of the Network of African National Human Rights Institutions, said that the Network was a strategic partner of the African Commission in the promotion and protection of human rights in Africa. On the general human rights situation, he lamented that after several years, human rights issues on the African continent still remain critical. Underscoring the alarming human rights situation in many parts of the continent, especially the ongoing conflict in the Great Lakes Region, that is now becoming a threat to international peace and security, he called on all the parties involved in the conflict for an immediate cessation of hostilities. He emphasised that democracy can only be realised through transparency, good governance, peace and respect for human rights, and urged governments to support their work.

12. Speaking on behalf of States Parties to the African Charter, the Minister of Legal Affairs and Human Rights of the Great Peoples’ Congress, Socialist Peoples’ Jamahiriya, Libya, Mr Hosni Alwiheshe, stated that the 44th Ordinary Session is taking place at a time when the question of human rights has become a concern for States Parties, and regarded as an important issue for the global agenda. He noted that armed conflicts continue to be the main cause of human rights violations in Africa. Mr Hosni Alwiheshe highlighted Libya’s contribution in the settlement of conflicts in the region by engaging belligerents in a process of constructive dialogue, and through the provision of humanitarian assistance to victims.

13. In her opening statement, the Chairperson of the African Commission, speaking on behalf of the Members and Staff of the Commission, and on her own behalf, expressed gratitude to His Excellency Alhaji Umaru Musa Yar’Adua, GCFR, President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, for inviting the Commission to Abuja, Federal Republic of Nigeria. She welcomed all participants and thanked the Government and People of Nigeria for hosting the Session.

14. The Chairperson noted that since the last Session a lot of development has taken place in the field of human rights. She indicated that the African Commission had organized a number of consultations and meetings to improve its working methods, and to forge closer collaboration with its various partners. She stated that despite some progress, the overall human rights situation remains unsatisfactory. She deplored the conflicts in a number of African countries where human rights and humanitarian laws are violated. In that regard, she said the African Commission is concerned about the escalating violence in the Democratic Republic of Congo and the related deteriorating human rights abuses, especially in the North Kivu Province.

15. She highlighted the need to build a culture of human rights observance and to establish strong mechanisms to protect human rights in Africa. She noted that economic and social rights are still beyond the reach of most Africans who continue to lack access to clean water, food, adequate housing, and called on States Parties to ensure the enjoyment of these rights. She expressed concern that the situation of women remains a very serious concern, especially in Somalia.

16. The Chairperson recalled that the drafters of the African Charter recognized that the promotion and protection of human rights should be our collective responsibility. She further noted that although the primary responsibility for human rights protection is on governments, other stakeholders have to play their own role. She, therefore, called on all stakeholders to reflect on how best they can continue to uphold human rights and human dignity in Africa.

17. Honourable Chief Odein Ajumogobia, SAN, Minister of Energy and Petroleum Resources, speaking on behalf of the President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, His Excellency Alhaji Umaru Musa Yar’Adua, GCFR, officially opened the 44th Ordinary Session of the African Commission.

19. He noted that Nigeria has had a long and proud relationship with the African Commission and is among the first African States to sign, ratify and domesticate the African Charter, reaffirming the commitment and unshaken resolve of Nigeria to live up to its obligations to uphold human rights and fundamental freedoms. Chief Ajumogobia pointed out that the 1999 Constitution of Nigeria provides a good foundation for human rights, and that the Nigerian judiciary has earned a reputation of protecting human rights in Nigeria. He stated that since the current President came to power in 2007, his administration has been working on issues such as the rule of law and due process that are necessary for human rights protection.

20. Chief Ajumogobia observed that the African continent is still beset with several human rights problems and the general lack of access to basic needs for dignified living. He stated that Africa cannot continue to be the object of pity by the rest of the world, and that self-reliance and the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals must be a priority of African States. Chief Ajumogobia emphasized that in order for Africa to achieve the Millennium Development Goals, it is important for all to realize that society is about empowering people to change their material conditions. He went on to state that the rights of Africans must be respected if they are expected to contribute to the crusade for Africa’s economic and social rebirth.

21. Noting the importance of the mandate of the African Commission to promote and protect human rights in Africa, he implored African Governments to work with the African Commission to do away with the culture of impunity in Africa, and to demonstrate that Africa and her people will have no tolerance for violators of human rights on the Continent. He urged the African Commission to re-dedicate itself to a programme of human rights education, to foster the attitudes and behaviours needed to uphold human rights for all members of society.

22. The Commission heard statements relating to the human rights situation in Africa from the representatives of the following States Parties: Algeria, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Cote D’Ivoire, Egypt, Ethiopia, Guinea, Libya, Mali, Mozambique, Rwanda, Saharawi Arab Democratic Republic (SADR), Senegal, South Africa, Sudan, Tunisia, Uganda and Zimbabwe.

23. Statements were also made by representatives of Intergovernmental and International Organizations, as well as by the National Human Rights Institutions in Africa and Non-governmental Organizations.

She recalled that at the 12th Summit of Heads of State and Government, the Executive Council adopted a resolution requesting the African Commission and the Committee to work in close partnership. She said that time has now come for the two organisations to cooperate more closely through, among other things, the organisation of periodic meetings, joint missions, and experience sharing.

25. The Representative of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Ms Samia Slimane in her statement, informed the Session that twenty one years on, the situation of human rights on the African continent remains generally grave. She indicated that the combination of corruption and impunity jeopardizes the efforts being deployed in many parts of the continent to alleviate poverty and strengthen peace building.

26. She praised the efforts being made by the African Union, Regional Economic Communities and States Parties to give effect to all categories of rights, including the right to development. She stated that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights intends to move from an ad hoc support to real partnership with the African Union through the intensification of its assistance to the AU, and the reinforcement of the capacity of the Peace and Security Council.

27. Ms Samia Slimane underscored that such cooperation between the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the AU will be formalised through a Memorandum of Understanding that will be signed during the AU Summit in January 2009. Further more, she called upon the African Commission to contribute to the Universal Periodic Review, by providing credible and reliable information on States Reports to the UN Human Rights Council.

28. The representative of the International Organisation of the Francophonie (OIF) Mr Tigri Alassani, expressed his appreciation for the Commission’s work in advancing human rights in Africa, and for its support to the work of national and regional mechanisms in protecting and promoting human rights. In this context, he confirmed his organisation’s commitment to support further the various initiatives undertaken by the Commission in raising awareness and respect for human rights in Member States, and assisting them to meet their human rights obligations. He recognised the facilitating role that the Commission could play in strengthening dialogue on and raising awareness of human rights in States Parties, and through the African Union.

29. He declared that the OIF is committed, through the Bamako Declaration on Democracy, to the consolidation of peace, the rule of law and the promotion of human rights in Africa. He indicated that the OIF has been involved in the resolution of conflicts in Africa, especially in Chad, the Central African Republic, Guinea, and Cote d’Ivoire.

30. The representative of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Elizabeth Abi Mershed, thanked the African Commission for the opportunity given her Organisation to make a statement at the Session of the African Commission. She indicated that the IACHR is the counterpart of the ACHPR in the Americas. She said that both institutions share the same objectives and face similar challenges. She indicated that the collaboration between the two organisations will help each of them to learn how to address challenges in the future. She concluded by stating that the Inter-American Commission is willing to strengthen its relationship with the African Commission.

32. Members of the African Commission presented their reports of the activities they undertook as Members of the Commission, as well as activities undertaken during the inter-session in the context of their various special mechanisms and mandates. The following Reports were presented on:
