III - Factors Restricting the Enjoyment of the Rights Guaranteed in the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights

24. Angola has emerged from more than two decades of civil war, and since the end of the war in 2002 the Angolan Government has endeavoured to rebuild the country; however, it is not easy to overcome the effects of the prolonged armed conflict.

25. The war in Angola was undoubtedly a fundamental factor which prevented citizens from fully exercising and enjoying their rights. The protracted armed conflict in the country incapacitated most of the country’s socio-economic structures and institutions. Moreover, the conflict caused the loss of many lives and injuries which resulted in physical disabilities and the massive displacement of the population, both within the country and to neighbouring countries. Access to essential basic services such as health facilities, schools and birth registration offices was affected for a long time.

26. Despite the end of the war, Angola still faces the problem of the existence of mines and unexploded devices of various types on over 35% of its territory, with the additional factor that the exact location of these minefields is unknown. The Government notes that 75% of the people living with disabilities in Angola are amputees as a result of explosive ordinances and landmines. Thus, in order to prevent the death or maiming of its citizens so as to be able to ensure its ongoing development programmes, Angola has to tackle the enormous task of de-mining.

III – Areas of concern

28. The Report does not highlight the challenges faced by the State Party in ensuring the rights of citizens.
29. The Government has not yet ratified a number of relevant regional and international human rights treaties.

30. With the exception of information on laws and regulations, the Report does not indicate practical measures taken to give effect to the provisions of the African Charter, and other relevant instruments duly ratified by Angola in various important areas such as:

- The criminalization of torture;
- The exercise of freedom of association;
- Freedom of expression and access to information;
- The protection of human rights defenders; and
- The protection of the rights of indigenous populations.

31. The statistical data presented is not current, in particular with reference to the employment of women in public institutions at local and national levels.

32. The African Commission is concerned by the reduction by 30% in 2009 of public spending in the health sector and the fact that the overall health budget dropped from 3.2% to 2.38%.

33. The Report does not indicate measures taken to ensure access by women and adolescent girls to reproductive health services and family planning.

34. It does not provide any information on the prevalence of harmful customary practices which affect women and young girls, nor does it refer to any legislative measures taken by the Government to prohibit early marriages or protect the rights of widows in the rural areas.

35. It does not indicate the existence of a legal framework for combating human trafficking in Angola, in particular trafficking in women.

36. It does not touch on specific measures adopted to guarantee the effective participation of indigenous populations at the decision-making level, within local and national institutions, and the right to education and health of indigenous children.

37. It does not provide any information on revenue obtained from the extractive industries, nor on initiatives taken to ensure transparency in the exploitation and utilization of mineral and natural resources in Angola.

38. It does not give any information on legislative or institutional measures introduced by the Government to criminalize torture and bring before the relevant courts the perpetrators of such practices.
39. The African Commission is concerned by the allegations of forced evictions without prior consultation with the affected citizens, and without adequate compensation.

40. The Commission is concerned by the allegations of harassment of human rights defenders, and the poor collaboration between the Government and some human rights NGOs.
